

Friends of Hog Island
Bremen, Maine

EST. 1936
WELCOME TO THE
HOG ISLAND AUDUBON CAMP

THE Guillemot

THE FRIENDS OF HOG ISLAND
ANNUAL IMPACT REPORT

2025 - 2026

In Recognition

OUR AMAZING BOARD

Scott Weidensaul
Board President

James Li
Vice Chair

Lena Gallitano
Secretary

Kenneth Totillo
Treasurer

Juanita Roushdy
Founding President

Megan Blackburn

Nancy Dickinson

Tony Ferrara

Rebecca Gilman

Jess Golumbeski

Anthony Hill

Steve Kress

Sara Morris

Laurie Bragg
ex officio

Tubular solar system on kitchen roof

Friends of Hog Island is guided by a dedicated and stable board of directors whose members bring deep expertise in ornithology, conservation, medicine, finance, the arts, and nonprofit leadership — and whose passion for Hog Island is deeply personal. This year, we are proud to report no turnover on the board, a reflection of the commitment and continuity that has long characterized FOHI's governance.

We are equally proud that 100% of our board members made a personal financial gift to FOHI this year. This level of participation speaks volumes about the confidence our trustees place in this organization's mission and its future — and it sends a powerful signal to funders, partners, and supporters that those closest to FOHI believe wholeheartedly in the work being done here.

Our sincere thanks go to all these volunteer members for their service, generosity, and unwavering dedication to Hog Island.

Staff Notes

DEAR FRIENDS,

As we reflect on the 2025 season, we are filled with deep gratitude. Last year, more than 100 volunteers contributed over 5,000 hours of their time to Hog Island, keeping the buildings maintained, the kitchen running, and the sleeping quarters welcoming for every camper who walked through the doors. Their dedication is the heartbeat of this place, and we are endlessly thankful for every hour freely given in service to this mission.

Thanks to the broad and growing base of support from our donors, we closed our 2025 financials once again in the black. More than 150 people give year after year to FOHI, and another 50 renewed their connection to the island last year after taking some years off. We were also thrilled to welcome 40 new donors into our community!

Deana Cavan, Executive Director and Adam DiNovo, Volunteer Coordinator, on the dock

This generous support allowed us to fulfill our annual $50,000 gift to the Audubon Camp — and go further. This year, we were able to invest in the camp in meaningful ways: a new Delta specimen cabinet for the preservation of bird skins in the Queen Mary lab, stainless steel tables and new coffee mugs for the kitchen, new pillows and pillow covers for camper comfort, an electric hoist to help better secure the dock, and birdseed throughout the season to keep the island alive with activity.

We also received wonderful news about FOHI's endowment, which was first established in 2011. That fund has grown substantially over the years and now provides an additional $50,000 in annual investment spending appropriation for camp operations — a testament to the long-term vision of those who built this organization. The endowment currently stands at $1.3 million, a milestone that speaks to the strength and sustainability of Hog Island's future.

Looking ahead, we are brimming with excitement for the 2026 season. Volunteer sign-ups have been truly unprecedented this year — nearly every camp session now has seven to eight volunteers committed to attend for the week. The energy and enthusiasm heading into this year is unlike anything we have seen.

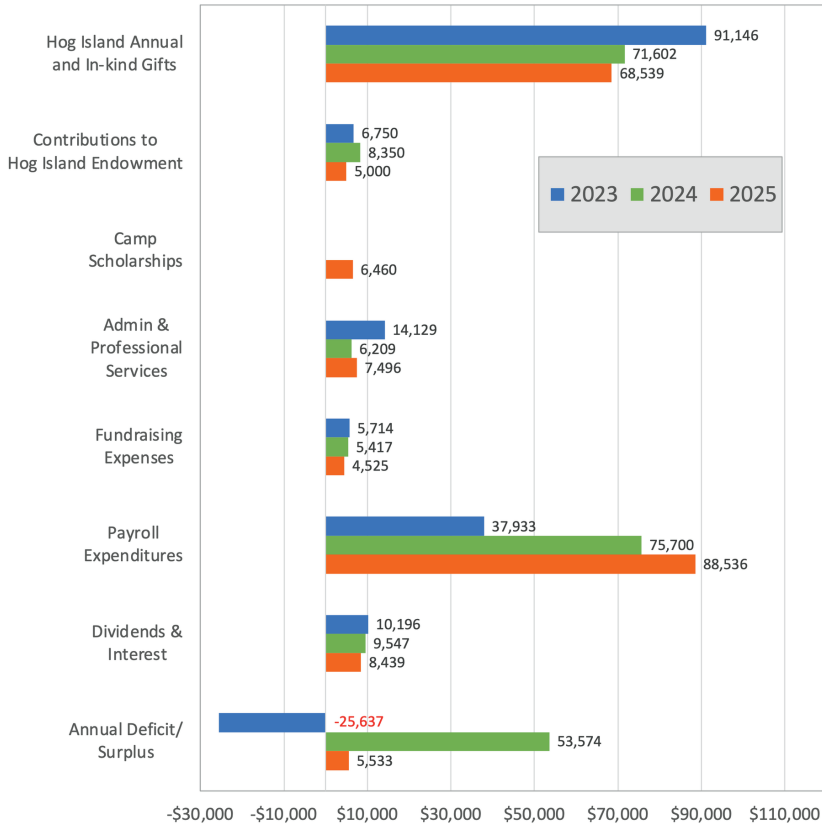

And of course, this summer brings a very special milestone: the 90th Anniversary of the Hog Island Audubon Camp. Audubon is planning a weekend celebration in August to mark this historic occasion, and FOHI volunteers will be honored with a special appreciation dinner on Friday evening. The weekend festivities also include a public Open House on August 22nd, offering workshops, bird walks, intertidal exploration, talks on Wabanaki history, and more. We hope to see many of our beloved volunteers and donors there to celebrate 90 years of the magic that is Hog Island. Check out more information on Page 16.

With gratitude and excitement for what lies ahead,

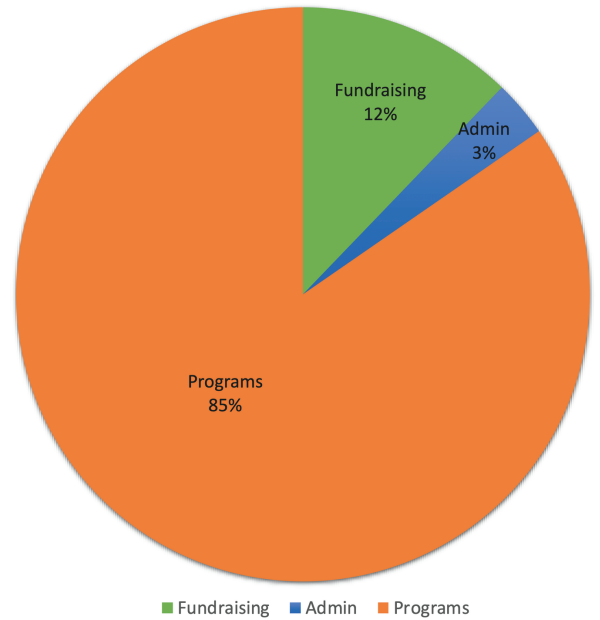

Deana & Adam

Financial Data

THANKFUL FOR OUR ABILITY TO CONTINUE SUPPORTING CAMP!

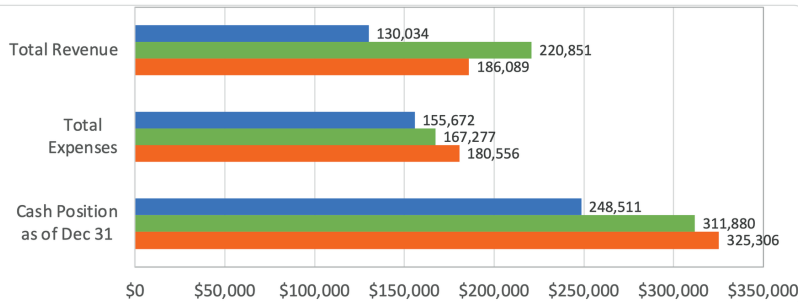

2025 Expenses by Class

Although fundraising was lower in 2025 compared to 2024, when we asked for extra support after the destructive winter storms, we still ended the year with a $5,533 surplus, and our cash position continues to increase to ensure we are ready if the camp requires emergency funds.

Below you can see revenue data provided by Audubon for the Hog Island Camp. Our $50,000 annual gift and the investment spending appropriation from the endowment FOHI started make up nearly 12% of the camp's annual revenue.

The Hog Island Center Endowment remains untouched and continues to grow through investment returns. Currently valued at $1,316,604, it is the National Audubon Seabird Institute's largest endowment fund.

It is Audubon's policy to apply the spending rate to the average of the market value of the funds for the preceding 5 years, including the latest fiscal year, to smooth out the effect of market fluctuations. The current rate is 5% and this will be subject to an annual review by the Investment Committee in consultation with the CFO and the Financial Committee.

FY2025 Revenue
Foundation Contributions	$26,338.78
Individual Contributions	$37,431.00
Organization Contributions	$53,821.41
Camp Registration (July 2024-June 2025)	$616,492.20
Rentals	$118,867.01
Investment Spending Appropriation	$54,252.00
Total Operational Revenue	$907,202.40

Mostly thanks to FOHI!

Donor Appreciation

2025 FINANCIAL SUPPORT

Marilyn Ackley
Carol Adams
Loretta Alden
Robert and Billie Albritton
Leigh J. Altadonna
Dana Anderson
William and Trina Anderson
Mid-Coast Audubon
Paul J. Baicich
Carol Bailey
Eliza Bailey
Carol Baker
Karlyn E. Barker
Helene Basile
Joe Beaudette, Terry Ford
Rori and Tom Bebko
Jon and Laurel Berrie
Breck and Lois Betts
Barbara Biancone
Elizabeth and Buzz Billik
Cheryl Bishop
Sharon and Randy Blackburn
Elizabeth Blake
Debbie Blicher, Peter Dain
Jack Boak and Karen Berg

Marian Bodine
Jef and Susanne Boeke
Nancy Bond
Jo Ann Bowes
Laurie Bragg
Kathryn Brown
Dorothy N. Brubaker
Richard Brundrett
Marilyn Buhyoff
Judith and Gary Bush
Deborah Butt
Betsy Cadbury, Art Borrer
Joel S. Cadbury
Peggy Cadbury, Ching Wong
Dudley Carlson
Kris and Chuck Carlson
Elissa Carter
Val and Tom Carter
David T. Catlin
Deana Cavan
Cynthia K. Christen
Valerie Church-McHugh
Kathryn M. Cleland-Sipfle
Suzanne Clephane
Debora Conrad

Jeff Cox
Kara Cox
Jill Craig
Lisa Curtiss
Rupert Cutler
Judy Das Gupta
Martha Davis
Joel DeCloux
Marion DeGross
Delaney-Geis Charitable Fund
Kathleen Deupree
Nancy and Michael Dickinson
Julie Dobrow and Lawrence Vale
John Dorsey and Linda Williams
David Doubleday, Betsy Stevens
Anne Douglas Williams
Lise Dumas
Denise Ellsworth
Wallace Elton
Roger and Bev Engle
Arline and Joel Epstein

Neal and Ronna Erickson
Dwayne and Suzanne Escola
Deborah and Will Ethridge
Sally Farr
Anthony and Cheryl Ferrara
David and Valerie Fitch
David and Cindy Fitch
Maureen O'Neil Fox
Stephanie Foy
Cynthia Freese
Benjamin Fuller
Lena B. Gallitano
Diane Geraci
Janet Getgood and Ernie Johnson
William and Marsha Gette
Edward S. Gilman
Rebecca Gilman
Marilyn Glace
Curtis and Sophie Glovier
Sandy Goodwin
Barbara Gordon

L to R, On the Snow Goose: Betsy Cadbury, Joel Cadbury, Tony Musgrave, and Peggy Cadbury

DONOR LIST CONTINUED...

Robert W. Gore	Liz McQuaid	Susan Schubel, Anthony Liss	Ellen Taus
Carolyn Gray	Holly Merker	Sue Schuur	Elisa Taylor-Goodwin
Patricia Gurney	Richard Mersereau	Joanne Sharpe	Maureen and Michael E. Murphy
Babette Gwynn	Tom and Martha Meyers	Eileen and Bill Shaughnessy	Fred and Beverly Trail
Jean Hall	Carole Miller	Ann Sherman	Joseph Trapani
Karrie Hanson, Benjamin Greene	Betsy Miner, Rozanne Gibeau	John and Margaret Sherman	Barbara Tucker
Rebecca Harriet	Karen and William Mook	Amy Simmons	Maureen Tucker
Edith Harte and Karl Matlin	Craig Morin	Mark Skinner and Judy Stone	Susan Twarog
John and Ann Hassett	David Morrisette	Aubrey L Smith, III	Robin Verhose
Melissa and Timothy Henahan	Elsie and Doug H. Morse	Dawn C. Smith	Kathryn and David Villano
Marsha Heuer	Carlos Munoz	Jonathan 'J.B.' Smith	Peter M. Vincent
Anthony Hill	Eileen Murphy	Marilyn E. Smith	Lisa and Steven Wallace
Peter Hinman	Tony Musgrave	Angela Sommers	Bob C. Wallis
Susan Hirschman	Harold and Barbara Namminga	Curtis and Judy E. Spencer	Deborah Walsh
Susan E. Hoane	Kathryne Natale	Ken S. Spirer and Joan Leitzer	Helen and Brooks Walsh
Donna Hocker	Lorraine S. Novinski's Estate	Rosemary and Edward Spreha	Alexander Ward
Robert and Joan Horn	Holly O'Shea	Kathy Stagl	Amy and Scott Weidensaul
James Hudson and Greig Stewart	Jancie and Lennart Olson	Steve Stancyk	Claire Whitcomb
Caroline Janover	Stephanie P. Herrick	Gary and Kathleen Starr	Kathryn and E. John White
Sally Jeffords	Vinobha Pannerselvam	Cindy and Mark Stevens	Pamela B. White
Elizabeth Johnson	Lea A. Patrick	Edith M. Stewart	Victoria Williams
Susan Kanellakis	Elisabeth T. Peterson	Tamara Stock and Robin Moody	Annie and Jock Winchester
Brenda E. Keener	Betsy H. Phillips	Nina Stoyan-Rosenzweig	Suzanne Winsor
Mitchell Kihn	Douglas Phillips	Sarah and Allan Strouss	Benjamin Wong
James Kirchhoffer	Robert and Gaye Phillips	James Stunkard	Loren and J.B. Wright
Bethany Kraft	Jacob Plotkin	John P. Sullivan, III	Shari Yudenfreund-Sujka
Steve and Elissa Kress	Pamela and Chris Polloni	Megan Sutton	Fredric Zahradnik
Louise Kuflik	Linda Pomeroy	Mike Sutton	Michael Zeloski
Mary and Anthony La Creta	Roberta S. Poor	Patricia Tanski	Thomas Zissu
Janii G. Laberge	Susan E. Porter, Howard Snyder
Deborah Lamperti	Kathleen C. Potrepka
Garth LaPointe	Richard D. Potter
Chelsea Lawrence	Colleen Prather
Joan LeBel	Jean Preis
Rita Lee	Mary Rafter
Kurt and Julie Leemann	Carol and George Ramsayer
Sarah and Steven Lewis	Mary Kate Reny
Benjamin and Bonnie Lounsbury	Reny's Charitable Foundation
Susan Lunden	Deborah Reynolds
Nelle Lyons	Juanita Roushdy
Jason Mager	Edward W. Rose III Family Fund
David S. and Linda M. Marsh	Elizabeth Rowe
Jeff Mason	Joy A. Russell
Barbara Maynard	Cynthia and Scott Rutan
Susan McAlister	Patricia F. Sanborn
Gail McFarlane	Rhoda Schaffer
Anne McManus	Elizabeth Schenker

Get your bird friendly beans!

Birds & Beans

Use Code FOHI26

For 5% off your order and 5% donated to FOHI

Friends of Hog Island
Bremen, Maine

Our Volunteers

Total Number of Volunteers: 105

Total Hours Worked: 5,237

Volunteer hourly rate is $34.79 according to new data from Independent Sector. This figure represents the estimated economic impact of volunteer services, highlighting their significant contribution to organizations and communities across the state, of Maine, which ranks in the top ten for volunteering.

Debbie Lamperti, ready to work!

Andrew Anderson
Rosie Andrews
Susan Andrews
Amanda Bailey
Eliza Bailey
Carol Baker
Sarah Benson
Zoe Borenstein
Art Borrer
Laurie Bragg
Bill Briggs
Betsy Cadbury
Joel S. Cadbury
Peggy Cadbury
Blair Clark
Debora Conrad
Carya Cornell

Sal Cosmedy
Tom Crockett
Judy Dearborn
Kathleen Deupree
Nancy Dickinson
Kathy Dodge
John Dorsey
Chris Edwardson
Cindy Edwardson
Mary Eggert
Neal Erickson
Ronna Erickson
Anthony Ferrara
Cheryl Ferrara
Michael Garahan
William Gette
Adam W. Hill

Anthony Hill
Bridget Hoke
Amber Householder
Paula Kubisek
Deborah Lamperti
Garth LaPointe
Tom Lecky
Kurt Leeman
Julie Leemann
Noel Leigh
Mark Lena
Kathy Lena
Jeanine Libby
Anthony Liss
Jerry Lord
June Lordi
Susan Lunden
Carolyn Mager
Jason Mager
Moe Martin
Abby McBride
Laura McCarthy
Barbara McEachren
Susan McGaulley
Tom Meyers
Martha Meyers
Beth Morris
David Morrissette
Kimberlie Moutoux
Tony Musgrave
Ulrica Nagel
Toby O'Leary
Holly O'Shea
Tracey O'Connell
Jancie Olson
Lennart Olson

Lorna Patrick
Linda Pomeroy
Leslie Preston
Shakira Provasoli
Margen Riley
Juanita Roushdy
Joseline Salmeron
Johanna Schlueter
Yael Seligman
Ann Sherman
John Sherman
Mark Skinner
Jonathan 'JB' Smith
Asa Snyder
Pete Snyder
Rosemary Spreha
Cindy Stevens
Mark Stevens
Amber Stewart
Judy Stone
Nina Stoyan-Rosenzweig
John P. Sullivan, III
Santi Tabares Erices
Zelle Tenorio
Beverly Trail
Fred Trail
Maureen Tucker
Alison Vooris
Chris Vooris
Helen Walsh
Patricia White
Linda Williams
Tess Wilson
Phil Woodbury
Sherrie York
Robert Young

Remembering Mary La Creta

A HOG ISLAND LEGEND

A tribute to her friend, Juanita Roushdy

Mary, front and center, with aluminum hat and FOHI shirt on backwards. Photo Credit: Tony Ferrara

Mary was every volunteer coordinator's dream: hardworking, ingenious, diligent, good-natured, fast, thorough, helped others, and had a wicked sense of humor. It kept her afloat and helped volunteers settle in and feel comfortable. She was indefatigable and a joy to be with. I met Mary in 2010 on Hog Island. We had answered Sue Schubel's desperate call for help that summer – not knowing what to expect. That call set the direction for the next phase of Mary's life. She had just overcome breast cancer and was ecstatic to be in the nurturing embrace of Hog Island's flora and fauna, with the ocean breeze filling her lungs with fresh air. Mary was hooked shape. Her stay in 2010 inspired Mary to finish her Bachelor's degree in environmental education (2021). For 15 years she often returned for the whole season as a volunteer or mixed it up a little by being a camper for a week and then switching to a volunteer. In the off season, she'd heed my call for help in FOHI's home office. In her hands, jumbled stacks of papers became orderly files and FOHI t-shirts - oh my! She was a precision folding machine - hundreds briskly turned into crisp, symmetrical stacks by size – each a masterpiece in the art of folding.

She returned in 2011 to help the newly formed nonprofit, Friends of Hog Island, get the island ship-

Mary did not know “slow “or “no-one will see it”. She took pride in doing the job right for FOHI, the camp, and herself; she cared deeply about the camp and FOHI. She even gently cajoled her husband, the “city boy,” to become a volunteer.

*Mary's last visit to Hog Island, 2025
Photo Credit: Juanita Roushdy*

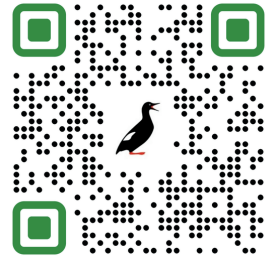

She was all in – heart and soul! She laughed, encouraged others, loved learning, adventure, the thrill of travel, Hog Island, and loved being a FOHI. For a group photo, she would put her t-shirt on backwards, proudly declaring that she was a “FOHI VOLUNTEER”. She did everything she could from Day One to make FOHI and Hog Island a success. She overcame life’s battles but one. Nonetheless, she outwitted it and made it to Hog Island one last time in September 2026; Perfect weather greeted her. Her beloved Hog Island glistened!

Her joy at being on Hog Island was infectious. No task was too great nor too much to ask if it benefitted the island. She was never bored, always finding something more to do than the assigned tasks – even those she made fun.

Where others might find total disarray daunting, Mary dove right in – cleaning, throwing out, organizing, enlisting others and before you know it, disarray became a magazine cover for organization and cleanliness – whether it be linens, housekeeping items, camper rooms, tool shed, kitchen tools and dishes, nothing was beyond Mary’s ability to make it sparkle and be useful.

“Dear Mary,
You left your loving mark on every building, pathway, and garden on the island, and yes, the laundry room, too! Rain or shine your laughter was ever present. We’ll miss you.”

*Donations can be made in Mary’s honor.
Use this QR code to go to fohi.org/support/, click on Donate Now button, and select from the dropdown, “Make an Honorary Gift” and put Mary’s name in the Note. Alternatively, you can always send a check and put Mary’s name in the check memo.*

*A master of organization and folding laundry!
Photo Credit: Juanita Roushdy*

Scholarships

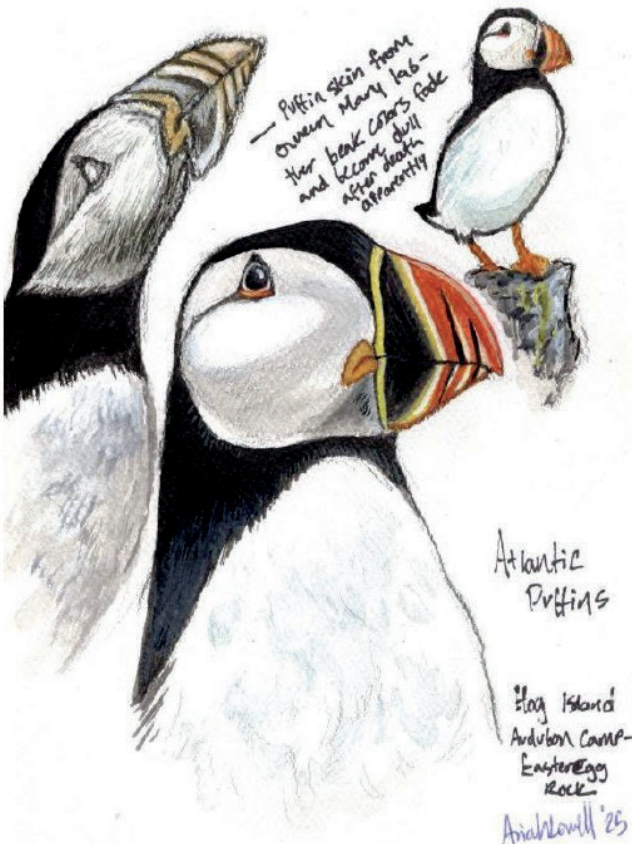

JUANITA ROUSHDY INDIGENOUS SCHOLARSHIP

The first recipient of the Juanita Roushdy Scholarship was Lisa Carney Nanibush from Wasauksing First Nation, Ontario CA, who attended Joy of Birding last June. She was extremely grateful for the deep healing she received by spending a week on Hog Island, and especially for the opportunity to see Puffins!

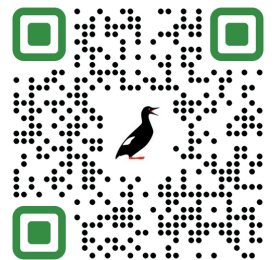

Lisa Carney Nanibush gazing out to Muscongus Bay

"Imagine a place so beautiful, peaceful, and free from the noise of regular life that it completely resets you. That is what Hog Island's Joy of Birding camp did for me. The calming ocean waves, melodic birds, and friendly, enthusiastic counselors transported me to a safe, therapeutic, and tranquil environment. I was welcomed and respected right away to this joyful community. I experienced early morning bird walks, island hikes, boat rides, and educational talks. I also enjoyed lots of free time to explore the island, catch the stunning sunrise, delight in family-like meal gatherings alongside my fellow campers with phenomenal food, and utilize the many educational birding resources available to campers. I left camp feeling more capable than ever to learn about birds, and the environment. I also left with routines that I will incorporate in my everyday life. Most importantly I have new friends that I will forever hold dear to my heart." —Lisa Carney Nanibush

We are still accepting donations for the Juanita Roushdy Scholarship Endowment to help provide Indigenous individuals with the opportunity to experience Hog Island and all of its natural beauty indefinitely.

Use this QR code to make a donation in honor of Juanita online or send a check and specify that it is for Juanita.

MAINE YOUNG BIRDERS CLUB SCHOLARSHIP

The Friends of Hog Island offers a scholarship each summer for a teen to attend the Coastal Maine Bird Studies Camp for Teens on Hog Island. Our 2025 winner was Ariah Lowell. To the left, check out her puffin sketch from the nature journal she created during her week there.

Powered by Sunshine: Hog Island's Solar Story

By James Li, FOHI Vice President

As Hog Island celebrates its 90th anniversary this year, it is worth taking a moment to look up. Not just at the birds that have inspired generations of naturalists since 1936, but also at the roofs of the camp buildings. Up there, the sun is quietly helping power the island.

In 2016, the Friends of Hog Island sponsored the installation of a solar electric system on the roofs of the Fish House and Bridge buildings. Ninety-two solar panels were installed by a team of FOHI volunteers working alongside Hog Island staff and supporters. What would have cost more than $100,000 if installed commercially was completed for about $20,000 thanks to donated materials, at-cost components and a great deal of volunteer energy.

But the real story of the project is not just about solar panels. It is about people.

The entire system was assembled and installed largely by volunteers. FOHI members and supporters worked side by side to design the system, transport equipment, mount the panels and bring the project to life. SunPower provided major support through donated and at-cost materials. The project also benefited from the leadership and expertise of several key contributors, including Benjamin Wong, who helped with design and donated portions of the system, and Dwayne Escola and his team who contributed technical expertise.

James Li and Joe Beaudette, FOHI Volunteers, Photo by Kimberly Newby

Eric Snyder, Hog Island Facilities and Operations Manager, coordinated the project and helped bring the effort together. Snyder was first inspired to imagine a solar system for Hog Island nearly a decade earlier while conducting a routine Audubon conservation easement inspection on nearby Cranberry Island, where he saw an autonomous solar installation that proved what might be possible.

Years later on Hog, panels were lifted into place, wiring was run across rooftops and a renewable energy system slowly took shape through the combined effort of people who care deeply about Hog Island.

In a year when the Hog Island camp celebrates 90 years of teaching people about nature and conservation, the solar project stands as a reminder that caring for the natural world also means caring for the energy choices we make.

The panels capture sunlight and convert it directly into electricity for the island. When the project was first imagined, the goal was ambitious. Solar power might provide up to 90 percent of Hog Island's electricity needs.

But the results have been even better.

Through a combination of solar production and smart conservation measures such as LED lighting and efficient water heating, the system produces slightly more electricity than the island uses in a typical year. Every light switched on, every phone charged and every hot shower enjoyed comes from energy that arrives freely from the sun.

Since installation, the panels have quietly generated a quarter-million kilowatt-hours of electricity. Put another way, that energy is enough to charge a thousand smartphones every day for more than fifty years, keep a lighthouse shining through the night for more than five-hundred years, or lift a one-ton block of concrete to the summit of Mount Everest more than ten thousand times.

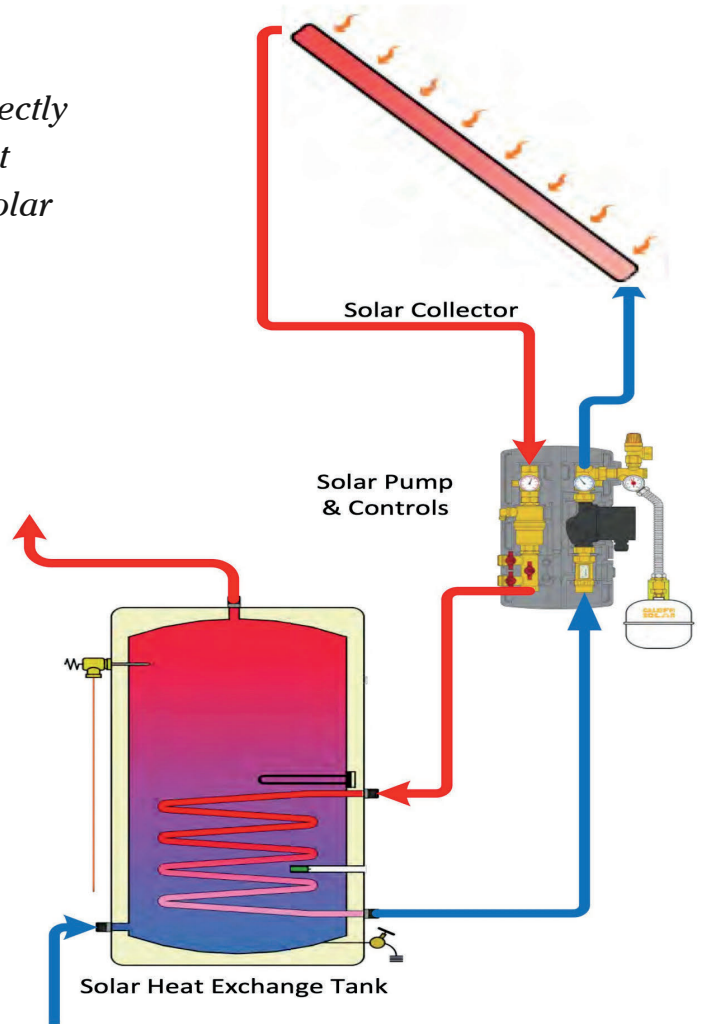

The system produces power year-round and feeds it into the grid. During the quiet winter months when Hog Island uses little electricity, the solar panels build up energy credits. Those credits are then used during the busy summer season when the camp is full and energy demand is highest.

The solar project also serves as a teaching tool. The system includes both micro inverters and a traditional string inverter, representing two of the main technologies used in modern solar installations. For many Hog Island participants, seeing renewable energy in action becomes part of the learning experience.

The island's use of the sun did not stop with electricity.

In 2023, volunteers installed a solar hot water system, donated by a FOHI friend, on the Bridge building that supplies the camp kitchen and Bridge inhabitants with hot water heated directly by sunlight. Rows of evacuated glass tubes on the roof capture solar heat and transfer it through a closed loop system to the building's hot water tank.

Even on cloudy days, these tubes collect enough solar energy to generate impressive heat. The vacuum inside each tube acts like a thermos, allowing temperatures inside to climb while the outside remains cool to the touch. When the temperature at the roof is higher than the temperature in the water tank, a small pump circulates the captured heat into the system. The result is wonderfully simple. Hot water from sunlight!

Elements of the solar hot water system, designed by James Li and Eric Snyder

CONTINUED NEXT PAGE...

Installing solar panels on the Fish House, Photo by James Li

Additional energy improvements have followed, including high efficiency heat pump water heaters that further reduce the camp's energy use both on Hog Island and at the mainland shore facility on Audubon Road.

Protecting birds ultimately means protecting the ecosystems they depend on, and that includes the climate systems shaped by the energy we use.

All of these efforts reflect something central to Hog Island's mission. For nearly a century the camp has helped people connect with birds, nature and the fragile ecosystems that support them. As climate change increasingly threatens those systems, projects like this show that practical solutions are already within reach.

The same sunlight that warms the island, lights Muscongus Bay and guides migrating birds overhead now helps power the camp itself. After all, the fuel that powers Hog Island's solar systems arrives every morning, completely free.

It's called Sunshine!

Eric Snyder and James Li, Photo by Kimberly Newby

Precious Memories that Last a Lifetime

By Hog Island Camper and Instructor, Jean Tate

Jean and her husband, Jim Tate on Hog Island in the 1960s

I spent the summers of 1966, 1967 and 1968 at the National Audubon Camp on Hog Island. During 1966 and 1967, I worked as secretary to camp director Bart Cadbury under the watchful eye of his wife, Ginny Cadbury. Farida Wiley of the American Museum of Natural History in New York City taught the plant life class during those years, but retired before the summer of 1968, when I taught the plant life class.

During the first year, Jim Tate (my now deceased former husband) and I lived in a second-floor room in the hotel – now known as the Porthole – back toward the staff cabins on the peninsula.

During the last two years, we lived in the Bingham Lodge (known today as the Bingham Cottage) back on the main island, taking a dory around the mussel bar during the first of those years and a motor boat during the second year. Both the oars and the motor produced great bioluminescence at night.

When we first arrived on Hog Island ocean water was used in a non-potable water system, so if one took a shower or used the toilet after dark, bioluminescence sparkled on one's body and hair, and in the toilet bowl. The water system was upgraded early that summer.

One of the two boatmen who ran the Osprey to the islands we visited, Elmer Osier from Round Pond, had a trick involving the dory that was used to ferry campers to shore. He would tie it off to the stern of the Osprey, using a bowline knot – but not until the Osprey had started to move quickly. Tying the bowline meant putting one's hand through a loop in the rope and retrieving the hand just before the rope was pulled taut and the loop snapped shut. Whoever tied the knot would have lost that hand if their timing had been off. Elmer tied the knot that way and seemed to enjoy the challenge.

When the campers were first ashore on whatever island was being visited, one of the staff would say something like "Although we have just landed, "____" (a female staff member) has already found a rare bird's nest! So I want all of the ladies, and only the ladies, to follow her." On one of these "rare bird nest" visits, I remember a quite proper woman spotting a young gull in the bushes and "walking" excitedly over to get a better look at it with her slacks around her ankles.

A group of campers on Hog Island in 1966

“I remember Instructor Art Borrer leading us all in a rousing rendition of “There’s a Hole in the Bottom of the Sea,” the words of which I still remember (with a bit of ad-libbing).”

Hog Island from Nash Hill in the late 1960s

Irish Moss pudding (see recipe on the right) was made for dessert at least once during each two-week camping session, using this common intertidal seaweed.

Each session also included a lobster boil and clam or mussel bake on the beach. Staff dug for clams and both bivalves and lobsters spent time in either the big saltwater aquarium in the Queen Mary or in a crate off the dock to clear them of sand before cooking. When the bivalves were steamed it was done under a layer of rockweed that, according to Joe Cadbury and Art Borrer, had to be laid in a counterclockwise direction.

```
RECIPE FOR IRISH MOSS PUDDING
                                (BLANC MANGE)
1 quart milk                    1½ squares semi-sweet
1 teaspoon salt                  or sweet chocolate
1 cup dried Irish Moss
3 Tablespoons sugar

Scald moss in milk, strain through cheese cloth, add sugar and salt. Pour into serving dishes. Chill. Serve with milk or cream.

(don't forget chocolate!!)
```

I remember, too, the squishy feeling of baby Leach’s storm-petrels soon after their parents had fed them lots, then left them to mature until ready to fly from their burrows.

I still remember also how much I enjoyed watching the pulsating chromatophores in the squid egg cases I viewed under a binocular microscope in the Queen Mary lab, too. That, the bioluminescence, and early morning noodling in tidal pools are among my favorite memories.

All these events happened when I was in my twenties, although I am considerably beyond that now. That’s an indication of the importance of the memories you continue to help build on Hog Island. Those memories will last a lifetime.

(Editor’s note: Jean Tate was part of the Hog Island staff for three summers in the late 1960s, including one year as plant life instructor during the standard, two-week-long natural history sessions. Jean, who plans to attend the 90th anniversary weekend in August, shared these recollections of her time on the island so long ago.)

Turning 90!

Audubon

Hog Island
Audubon Camp

90th Anniversary

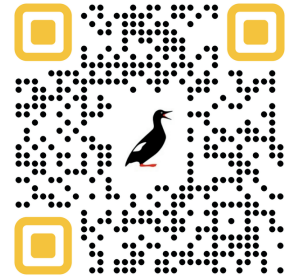

Hog Island Audubon Camp opened in 1936 with a vision: to teach people about nature conservation and inspire them to become leaders in the environmental movement in their own communities. Thousands of people have been touched by the magic of Hog Island over the last 90 years. Today, the camp continues building the legacy of exceptional environmental education. There are multiple ways to celebrate on the island with us:

- 90th Anniversary Weekend Session - August 20-23
- FOHI Appreciation Dinner & Keynote - August 21, 5-9pm
- 90th Anniversary Open House - August 22, 9am-4pm

Scan the QR Code to the right to sign up, or go to this link:

<https://www.audubon.org/hog-island/explore/90th-anniversary-celebration>

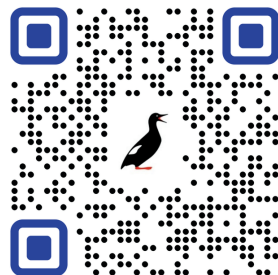

GET YOUR 90TH FOHI GEAR!

We are now accepting pre-orders for exclusive 90th Anniversary merchandise from Wings Custom Apparel in China, ME (formerly Whitt's). This specially designed logo recognizes that without FOHI, the camp would not have seen its 90th year and represents FOHI's commitment to the camp for its next 90 years.

With each item purchased, FOHI will profit $10-$15, all which will go back to supporting the camp. There will be two orders placed in late May and July. We prefer that you pick up your merchandise on the island, but will ship to those not able to be here this summer.

Choose from the items on the following page, and fill out the pre-order form with payment at the QR code shown right or at the link:

<https://bit.ly/90thOrder>

FRIENDS OF HOG ISLAND
Here to serve camp for its next 90 years

ITEM

PRICE

Eddie Bauer Fleece (Dark Gray)	$60
Carhartt Beanie (Brown & Gray)	$30
Northface Backpack (Gray)	$100
Yeti Mug (Navy)	$50

See Specs and Mock-ups here:

<https://bit.ly/90thmerch>

VOLUNTEERING UPDATE!

Thank you to everyone for their enthusiasm to volunteer this year. Although most camp weeks are full, we do still need volunteers the week of May 30 - June 5. And we are always looking for local folks that can come help for a meal, but especially those willing to help turn over camp on Fridays. Reach out to Adam at volunteer@fohi.org to let him know you'd like to lend a hand!

Did you see our Volunteer Appreciation video from 2025?

Scan the QR code or go to: <https://bit.ly/2025FOHIs>

Spring Work Week 2025, Photo by Jean Hall

Join us in Celebration!

AUGUST 20-23, 2026

THE MISSION OF THE FRIENDS OF HOG ISLAND IS TO PRESERVE THE LEGACY AND SUPPORT THE CONSERVATION AND NATURE PROGRAMS AND ACTIVITIES OF THE AUDUBON CAMP AT HOG ISLAND, MAINE.

Please see our annual appeal included with this report. Your gifts this year are extra special because they will carry us forward to the camp's centennial year.

Donate at fohi.org/support or mail to FOHI, P.O. Box 242, Bremen, ME 04551 www.fohi.org | info@fohi.org | facebook and instagram @friendsofhogisland | EIN: 27-3608853.